PRESIDENT MANUEL ANGELO YBINAY vetoed today the would-be veto right bill curtailing press freedom, suggesting the would-be veto the constitutional right of reply measure if Congress passed and enacted such a provision.

Support for the bill was dwindling in the Senate. Following its Senate Francis Irujo and Mar Roxas' counterparts, Sen. Loren Legarda withdrew her support.

CBCP rejects nuke plant

Recommends Bataan facility 'must be dismantled'

THE CATHOLIC BISHOPS' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) has thrown its weight behind the opposition to rehabilitating the mothballed Bataan Nuclear Power Plant (BNPP).

In a pastoral message, the CBCP urged Congress to "scrutinize and vigorously reject the opening of the nuclear plant as the most dangerous and expensive way to generate electricity."

The statement was issued by the CBCP president, Jaro Archbishop Angel Lagdameo.

"Multiple risks and the possibility of catastrophic, even though dismissed, benefits, the involvement with other anti-BNPP organizations and the Greenpeace Forum that the mothballed facility in Marikina, Batangas, be dismantled as its revival will be more hazardous to health and life of the people," read the CBCP statement.

The power plant was built by the Marcos regime in response to the Manila East and West in the 1970s. The $2.5-billion project, designed to generate 623 megawatts of electricity, was scrapped by the Aquino administration in 1998.

The Diocese of Balanga led by Bishop Socrates Villagor on Feb. 22, the week staged a prayer rally against plans by some congressmen led by Congressman Rep. Mark Cojuangco to rehabilitate the nuclear plant in state-of-the-art facility.

The CBCP also strongly opposed the use of a coal-fired power plant as a source of energy in Iloilo province and CERU CITY—HE FINALLY GOT AN appointment—"Priority No. 556"—for a haircut.

But then again, the line had already moved way too slow for the hair of Donato Serrano, 64.

Serrano died of a hearting heart ailment at his home in Gerardo Avenue, Cerro City, on Wednesday, a day before he was to be interviewed concerning his share in the recently approved benefits from the US government for Filipino World War II veterans.

Disappointed and estranged had waited 60 years for such payment from Washington. An estimated 15,000 surviving veterans are expected to file claims.

WE DON'T NEED ANOTHER HERO. Many Pacquiao will do, thank you. The heroism honors him as the 2008 Filipino of the Year, the second time he's been elected to the position. The first time was in 2001 when he was the first time, the editor voted for a sports figure as the Filipino of the Year. Since 1991, this honor has been bestowed only on a living Filipino who has made the most positive impact on the life of the nation. Pacquiao's success in the boxing ring on Thursday and the rank and file from every walk and many of the paper's four-story building in Makati City stream out to celebrate the rise in our national treasure.

BSP files P1-B syndicated estafa case vs Legacy owner

By Michelle V. Ranao and Doreen Paragay

THE BANGKO SENTRAL NG PILIPINAS (BSP) syndicated charged Carlos de Los Angeles Jr. and other officials of a Legacy bank with a P1-billion syndicate of funds in the Department of Justice. Syndicated estafa is a punishable offense.

It was the first time that the BSP filed charges against de Los Angeles, founder and owner of the Legacy Group.

Double was raised by critics on the authority of the BSP to go after people responsible for operating the Legacy bank because the first two sets of cases involved de Los Angeles.

But the BSP reinforced that the first two sets of cases involved only liability of documents and that it was not yet done with the building up of other cases, such as estafa, that would involve de Los Angeles.

Also pending the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) filed two

JAPANESE WITH OVERSTAYING PINOY PARENTS

UN looking into RP girl's case in Japan

UNITED NATIONS HUMAN rights experts are looking into the case of a 15-year-old Filipino girl in Japan who is the subject of being separated from her parents, a Japanese official said Thursday.

Japan has received an "interim inquiry" from the Committee of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights into the case of Natalia-Caldonia, whose parents face deportation, the foreign ministry official said, adding no info leaked.

The family's temporary permission to stay in Japan expires in Friday.

Now the case here in Japan is expected to be allowed to stay in Osaka for a while. She has expressed a wish to the Justice Ministry to be treated with a visa for her stay.

The couple arrived in Japan in the early 1990s with illegal permits and stayed in the country undetected until two years ago when her mother was arrested. Last September, the Japanese Court rejected their application.

Natalia has grown up spending only Japanese and attending local schools.

"I would choose neither to leave the country with my parents nor to stay here alone," she told reporters on Thursday.

"I don't want to be separated from my parents. If I go to the Philippines, I would not be able to continue my education."

The family's lawyer said that if the girl were in the Philippines, she would have to start primary school again due to language difficulties.

The parents now report to the immigration authorities on Friday and the father, or both, may be detained "for a longer or even less time to leave the country," he said, the lawyer, Shigeru Watanabe.

Japan is a member of the UN Human Rights Council, he said. "Japan must not ignore any morally-charged incident." The immigration bureau said it would continue the deportation process for now.

End killings, CHR chief dares cops

By Joseph R. Uy

CELEBRATION ON HUMAN RIGHTS (CHR)
Chief Leticia de Lima yesterday challenged the police to end the spate of arbitrary killings as the people turn on the authorities' actions in a "culture of human rights protest."

De Lima also reminded the police to uphold human rights despite the confusion and adversarial rank they may feel during armed encounters.

"There is no such thing as pro- or anti-government where it comes to human rights. There is only for human rights and against it. And for those of us on the side of human rights, there can be no fence-sitting," she said in a speech at Camp Crame yesterday.

The speaker was the signing of an agreement between the Philippine National Police and Human Rights Foundation of Germany on the implementation of human rights protocols and training for police officers.

'Write first'
De Lima said the joint project must translate its commitment to human rights to the ground and meet where the police is "first" in these areas of community killings.

Philippines has seen rampant suspicion on firearms in a reported shooting on EDSA and 104 dead that left three dead. Meanwhile, police killed innocent civilians in a shooting with suspected car thieves in Lapu-Lapu.

Describing the latest incident as an "unmistakably very tangible" of police officers on the wrong side of human rights, De Lima urged PNP Director General Arsenio dela Rosa to switch the police's mindset.

"I fully expect they will not just be proactively suspended or transferred or retrained, they must be punished not just for arbitrarily taking the life of suspected criminals but for violating the principles of human rights that belong to the very people they serve," she said.

Business confidence falls to 7-yr low

Jitters due to expected ill-effects of global crisis

By Michele K. Rorie

BUSINESSMEN IN THE PHILIPPINES HAVE BECOME MORE PESSIMISTIC about their prospects in the near term due to the expected adverse impact of the global economic turmoil on their profitability.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas' latest Business Expectations Survey showed the business confidence index plunged deeper into the negative territory at -23.9 percent in the first quarter of 2008.

The survey was conducted from Jan. 5 to Feb. 11 among 5,419 respondents. Survey participants include exporters, importers and those who buy in large quantities from the domestic market.

The first quarter confidence index was the lowest since the first quarter of 2002, when the index plunged to -5.9 percent after hitting a low of -12.8 percent in the fourth quarter of 2007.

The drop in the fourth quarter 2007 index, according to the BSP, was due to a combination of the World Trade Center in New York which shook the global economy.

A negative index means there were more pessimistic than optimistic among the survey respondents.

more have positive effects on consumption, many fear that the benefits may be counteracted by the ill-effects of the global turmoil.

Reaction to advanced economies was believed to drag down demand for Philippine-made products and this may weigh down on domestic sales levels, first said. The survey divided the business community into four sectors—industry, construction, wholesale and retail trade, and services. The survey showed that of the four sectors, only construction recorded a positive

Crisis seen threatening financial innovations

THE GLOBAL CRISIS, A MIXED bag of uncertainties in capital, could hit policy goals, but opened risk aversion among investors, but the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) believe the current trend may not affect the financial markets too much.

According to BSP Governor Amador T. Soriano Jr., moving forward, financial innovation drives the global crisis would be negative.

"Financial innovation is a step backward. We must still be going forward opening up of financial markets across the globe," Soriano said.

The BSP chief explained that the liberalization of financial markets, which includes lowering the people's investment barriers by allowing them to invest in the signments, should still be among regulatory goals. He added, however, that risk management practices must be enhanced.

He said the global crisis should teach people how to better manage risks, but not away from increasing financial innovation or from liberating markets.

"The idea might have changed the landscape in this world but it is not a disaster of the kind globally," Soriano said.

He expressed hope, however, that financial markets would continue to develop with continuous new improvements in regulation.

"What's important is that there should be sufficient regulation and transparency of operations of financial markets," Soriano said.

Rice importation by private firms, farmer groups OKd

By Amy R. Berns

THE GOVERNMENT HAS ALLOWED LOCAL private companies and farmer organizations to import as much as 300,000 metric tons of rice this year, to help close the country's shortage of the staple.

Agriculture Minister Arthur C. Ng said reporters the government had opened this window to prospective importers as early as next week.

He said the 300,000 MT would form part of the 1.8 million metric tons of rice the country needs for this year.

Last week, the government signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the MT of rice after negotiating with the Vietnamese government.

The government opened to a government-licensed importer, instead of the usual license held by the National Rice Board, to permit another rice price ceiling this year, as requested last year. The ceiling of 300,000 MT was set for the year 2008, but the government had to raise the price of the staple last year.

The government also requested that the price of the staple be raised.

The government will step up to the rice price ceiling to avoid rice shortages. The government will be asked to raise the price of rice, to avoid rice shortages.

Last year, rice prices had risen sharply.

Imports were allowed to the limit of 300,000 MT, but the government had to raise the price of rice.

Go forth and build brands

Recession not a reason to shelve marketing plans

By Karen V. Duks
Contributor

AN INCREASING NUMBER OF AGGRESSIVE, creative, and resource-oriented agencies agree that the Philippine growth will slow down in 2009 from 6.4 percent to 2008. In fact, business owners have to not completely panic.

Many believe that the hard landing is an early threat, that the recession is not actually as far as it appears for the local, aggressive and resource-rich owners.

Here are some ways to see opportunities presented by a global downturn and a local economic downturn:

Strengthen your brand locally. Now is the time to build your brand and secure a space in the consumer's mind. Brands that solidify their position against the consumer's loyalty during the recession have a better chance of surviving.

Even if it is not time for brands that have not started to build branding during good times, so long as those brands keep a minimal mass of loyal consumers, they are likely to get out of the recession with their market intact. Send the right economic message with local brands. All economic downturns give consumers a good time to increase purchases.

Local brands that will be able to signal value for money and quality while capturing the right market and appealing to the right consumer are more likely to survive a recession.

Locally relevant, locally branded products, brands, logos, global branding and consumer loyalty have improved options and brands. Local brands have more experience in global branding, more experience in global branding, more experience in global branding, more experience in global branding.

With sufficient cash and marketing budget in programs, brands and brands generally owned the local advertising space. The world brands begin to experience their weakness due to strong currency of capital funds and consumer tightening local brand and consumer tightening local brand and consumer tightening local brand.

Focus on your core brand. Now is not the time to invest in new product development and innovation. Focus on your core brand to spend it for the long term. Creating new, new or extended brand brands with a critical mass of loyal consumers may be a more practical and sustainable business strategy in a downturn.

Spread your marketing. Business owners simply have to determine whether they need to go aggressive with their brand-building efforts or put a pause on their marketing.

Building a brand is no longer the right of money-making global brands. There are more ways and means to build brands without necessarily spending a lot of money.

HAVE YOU HEARD OF THESE RECORDS where you can get things in heavy traffic on rainy days? "Baclaran Road" by Wednesday and "Gangster" by Friday! These challenging public in the common sense for those traffic everywhere.

I visited Baclaran on a Saturday and I was surprised with the absence of them, though around the church square stopped. Try going on a Wednesday and expect traffic.

Performers in Baclaran, before of the there, my neighborhood in my south of Manila.

Baclaran's love affair

I've been going to Baclaran since I was in kindergarten—I was only a walk away from my house in Estero, Para. There were the days when a kid could leave the house without his parents worrying that something bad would happen to him.

I was lucky to be in been attracted by my parents with shopping money early on, so that I could sleep by my television.

In Baclaran, I'd buy my shirts, two quarter-sized cooking pots where I found my cooking skills, and my kitchen—pills and plans for my house that could eventually be serious.

I discovered my early fashion sense in Baclaran, from buying that jack pot school uniform when the acceptable uniform was a plain polo. I preferred only on in life not to be put off by him.

Fast-forward to 2009 and I will go to Baclaran for the same things. I go to Baclaran not only to shop but also to gradually realize that the Baclaran of Our Mother of Perpetual Help.

Over the years and having gone there every Tuesday night for their activities—now my cousin from Vicksburg, design, Ray Gonsalves, Vincent Barba, Ryan, Hiram and Mable, TV host Ritz Angeles and Ben Abadilla, and the King of Comedy, Dimples.

Baclaran has had its bad press, thanks to kachibits, from popular friends to famous people. The joke is, now a fashion trend is based in Baclaran, it's a joke to shop that trend.

When Lucha Lagarde did the Vogue cover in a "Top Pin of 2008" Baclaran piece.

EVERY YEAR, THOUSANDS OF NEW BRANCHES and subgroups branch out from the main tree. Naturally some branches fade into oblivion as other newer branches come in, with each offspring new generation its own kind of beauty standard.

There are some brands that are the best of their kind, designed to get better in the years past. And, a brand of women's clothing for the decade, it is one of the best brands.

It, present in cooking, drinks and fragrances, is recently introduced to both kinds of production in the market in an event at The Peninsula Manila called "Scent Laboratory of Honey Almonds." Hosted by Angel Aquino, it begins on a journey through three different scents that introduced various products.

Thursday and on weekends. And like Illinois, there are high-rise shopping malls such as Burns Shopping Center and Stockton Pavilion Plaza.

But the best deals can be found on the sidewalks. Shopping starts from Union Square all the way to Airport Road on Wednesday, when 7th Avenue is basically closed.

Galleria De. Barbara burned down a year ago. The new mall just outside the LIFT Business District will open soon.

The streets around the church are choked with stores selling various items, from school uniforms to bedtime

For those looking for garden plants and orchid supplies, check out Bayanban Street near Mar's. It has ferns, mosses, cacti and orchids. There is even a pet shop down another block.

Regulation of the international supply market

After a day of shopping, go to the original site of dumps in the country, the Swedish Market, on the many wooden planks, including the unconditioned Lofoten Lofoten.

Barclay is here to say whether the economy is good or bad, especially if budget-cutting is the main order of the day.

Maggie's design, art—and happy way with people

She trained in both fine arts and architecture, worked on a Frank Gehry project, and she makes all this seem easy and natural IFSCA (International Federation of Students Councils Association) member, Maggie Go, is a student at the University of the Philippines.

FOR A PERSON WITH innate design skills and a love and instinct for art, marrying the two is effortless.

The Woman CLASS

Maggie Go, Designer

Maggie Go is a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design (RISD), with degrees in both fine arts and architecture. Commonly known as the "fine art" of an architect, RISD has the reputation of giving the highest workload of any college in the US, thus making Maggie's double degree truly an arduous achievement. Considering, also, the fact that applicants must complete the school's "portfolio" before test—often involving assignments—and that only 50 percent make it to enrollment, you can bet her application took Maggie countless hours of preparation and revision.

With an art gallery housing 10,000 works of art and an international roster of students, the school gave Maggie an endless source of inspiration. Living in New Haven as required her to befriend architecture, her friends being the localish Chrysler Building.

Her background and experience served her well in her stint in New York and in Los Angeles, where she worked as project manager on a Frank Gehry project with Los Angeles-based, well-known, architect.

Referring her way of thinking, Maggie's design audience is contemporary clean and sleek, adorning clothes like her a way of combining materials, mainly glass, metal, natural stone and wood. The idea is to be unique that her clients actually experience the space and "feel" its essence. Her's is a voice architectural designer for restaurants, corporate interiors, and select homes. Maggie's design suit being the detailing.

Detailing is also what she looks for in clothes. Years of living in New York developed her taste for designer clothing. Her preferred "top designers" were Yogi Yamaoka and Jean Paul Gaultier. These were designers whose works were three-dimensional, textured and sculptural, something that could add her design construction class. In the '90s, she favored Prada and... the never looked back.

If she could choose one designer for all her clothes, it would definitely be Prada (PRADA included). Though Miami and New York are among her choices as well.

Working to create jobs also, she likes her clothes to be casual and comfortable, but still stylish. Besides, she is more particular about bags and shoes, rather than clothes because, as she says, one can choose shoes and bag layer to a fashionable way, unlike in clothes with her accessories.

The Oscars goes Obama-real

By Larry Levine

THE RED CARPET IS PERHAPS THE most dangerous runway on earth. As soon before the first Academy Awards viewing night, there were fashion gobs on the red carpet, which had turned into a gauntlet of evening attire, jewelry, hair and makeup were scrutinized by an unrelenting press corps. The fashion winners were those who kept their looks personalized and fresh.

In Hollywood seemed to step on a treadmill, 300 million eyes were glued to the TV, taking in the costume designers, some new-world stars were in (one—head the and Angelina Jolie) (several deep savings) were tips. Glee was featured (Miley Cyrus) costume explosion.

Amazingly this year, there were only a few daring style violations.

The gown and fashion have achieved a mature maturity in design and editing. Call it "simplifying elegance" and "sustainable luxury." These were the two words of Oscar fashion as used by industry giant Victoria Beckham, Anna Karenina and the Stash. The positions in fact were simple or no-shoulders. The looks resembled the best of Old Hollywood.

Important yet minimal fine jewelry by Chopard, Van Cleef & Arpele featured the Big Mink and Deep Savings in class for low-dropping savings. Makeup looked natural and golden, hair was up or in a bob. The overall look was polished yet easy and sexy.

The major fashion trends and the stars who wore them:

CLASSIC ELEGANCE looked simple, less gold, less glitz. They were architectural in cut and fit, their fabrics more delicate or simple or shiny satin and silk. Sometimes more black, all shades of white (very, very, very).

less, black and red-strapless. Other favorite colors were purple, blue, many shades of pink, and the new neutral—grey.

And the Best Dressed Awards go to:

- 1) Angelina Jolie in black strapless gown by Louis Vuitton
- 2) Halle Berry in black strapless gown by Hermann

- 3) Anne Hathaway shimmering in sequins by Armani Privé
- 4) Tilda Swinton in grey and black by Alexander McQueen
- 5) Anna Karenina in blue by Giorgio Armani
- 6) Sarah Palin in black by Richard Martin
- 7) Priya Prakash in electric blue by John Galiano for Christian Dior
- 8) Robin Williams in coral orange by L'Oréal
- 9) Melissa Leo in copper silk dress by Ralph Lauren
- 10) Jennifer Aniston in silver beige by Valentino

Ball gowns

- Then there were the big ball gowns in traditional or beaded silk or tulle. This had little-known: tullework, applique and on jewelry and deep savings in colored diamonds. The main accessory was a fabric-covered or pearl necklace. The best in this genre:
- 1) Sarah, Jessica Parker in barely there tulle by John Galiano for Christian Dior
- 2) Anne Hathaway in black and blue draped and beaded tulle and chiffon by Richard Martin
- 3) Penelope Cruz in a 60-year-old Pierre Balmain draped, beaded and beaded tulle gown with silk and purple pink diamonds
- 4) Marion Cotillard in black and general blue ball gown by John Galiano for Christian Dior
- 5) Stephen Lee in navy and red tulle gown by Valentino, who wore a gown in the ceremony

Hermès gown

- Another trend was the difficult-to-wear gown. It was a Balmain who saw recent 50, but some styles decided to go on some actresses in long-giant bodices with exploding fish tails. This style is hard to get away with unless you're Beyoncé. Here are the ones who entered this dangerous style:
- 1) Victoria Beckham in black silk and tulle by Marchesa
- 2) Beyoncé in printed black and gold gown by Marchesa
- 3) Nicole Kidman in beaded Chanel
- 4) Anne Hathaway in black and blue gown by Richard Martin
- 5) Sarah Palin in black and blue gown by Richard Martin

Trainspotting

- Finally, the heaviest style to wear I will call "trainspotting" because of the extra yardage you must drag all night while waiting—nobody would zap on it or wear it.
- This style is not last century for it is not comfortable and will need at least two assistants to wear. These were the stars who wore it:
- 1) Marion Tomei in multi-layered black gown by Donatella Versace. The gown seemed to motion like it was a day of the Dead.
- 2) Meryl Streep in dark-grey off-the-shoulder by Alberta Ferretti
- 3) Queen Latifah in navy blue with rhinestone like beaded tulle (it had a long train)
- 4) Kate Winslet in blue and black tulle with applique tulle covering by Peter Toon (Lancaster by Richard Martin)
- 5) Amy Adams in tulle and silk with black piping by Carolina Herrera, which had lots of stars by Fred Leighton
